Bengaluru : Extentia, announced plans to expand to Bengaluru by opening a development center located on the fourth floor of Akshay Tech Park at Whitefield, here. Popularly called the ‘Silicon Valley of India’, the name denotes Bengaluru’s status as a global IT hub. Along with Extentia’s corporate headquarters in Pune, the new location substantially increases its Indian footprint.

Increased demand for the company offerings related to mobile, cloud, and design services from existing and new clients led to the establishment of the Bengaluru center. Added to this, Extentia will also have to access to the city’s large and diverse talent pool. Many Extentia clients call Bengaluru home, hence the new office enables the organization to move closer to them as well, and is in line with Extentia’s business growth strategy.

‘We’re excited about our expansion into Bengaluru – it was inevitable that we would set up a new development center here,’ said Umeed Kothavala, CEO, Extentia. ‘Extentia looks forward to working even more closely with our partners and customers in Bengaluru, and extending relationships for the long-term.’ He added
